

iQuestions Faculty, Debra Taylor

Question:

I bleed after sex. Is this normal?

Answer:

You really should not be bleeding after sex. So, no, I wouldn't say that that's normal.

I would have all sorts of questions for you: "Is there pain?" "Is there pain with intercourse?" "What is the activity that possibly you and your partner are doing that is producing this?" "Are you having incredibly vigorous sex?" "Is it every time that you have intercourse?"

There are lots and lots of questions. But the bottom line is, you should not have pain and you should not have bleeding with usual sex.

So, you need to go see your nurse-practitioner or a good OBGYN and find out why you are bleeding.